Boston's Back Bay: a neighborhood rich with history and present-day culture that is equally warm and inviting, exciting and trendy. Architecturally, the Back Bay area enchants residents and visitors alike with its combination of breathtaking Victorian buildings and outstanding modern skyscrapers. The buildings at 222 Berkeley and 500 Boylston Street, are part of Boston's iconic skyline, fit perfectly into the elegance and style that is the epitome of the Back Bay.
Enter through Berkeley Street and you will be transfixed by the warmth of this Robert A.M. Stern-designed building. Behind the impressive portico, a marble staircase leads to a beautiful second-floor “winter garden.” Illuminated five flights up by natural skylights, this area is much like an indoor courtyard that can be used as a meeting area or a place to take a break.

Housed within this 22-floor Boston-styled exterior are 550,000 square feet of prime office space (with ideal views of the Charles River and Copley Square), and services accommodating to the tenants such as: on-site management, 24-hour tenant access, security personnel, barber shop, dry cleaners, car care center and 1000 parking spaces shared with its adjoining building, 500 Boylston.

Retail establishments are connected to the two buildings, and many others shops can be found in the surrounding neighborhood. For those who take public transportation, the building is within short walking distance of the subway, commuter rail, and Amtrak train.
222 Berkeley's expansive three-story concept space
222 Berkeley’s concept terrace with a view
Before entering 500 Boylston one is struck by the classic yet timeless architectural design which is the result of two esteemed architects, John Burgee and Philip Johnson. Elegant as it is modern, 500 Boylston captures the essence of historic Boston while standing out as a unique and eye-catching edifice.

Stately columns support the carved address, while an array of traditional New England-esque lampposts welcome patrons to the winged outdoor entryway. Both the lower and higher level two-story windows feature an arch design that complements the adjacent Trinity Church, yet another example of the modern buildings blending with Victorian-era buildings. Upon entering 500 Boylston, the patterned floors and marble wall elements are contemporary and artistic – like neo art deco.

This award-winning building features amenities attractive to the visitor and businessperson alike: 760,000 square feet of building space, on-site management, security personnel and retail tenants. 500 Boylston shares 1,000 indoor parking spots with 222 Berkeley, and public transportation is within easy walking distance.
Both 222 Berkeley and 500 Boylston are situated in one of the most exciting areas of Boston. Though the Back Bay’s origins are a significant part of Boston’s history, this section has evolved into the one of the most desirable destinations for business, tourists, students, and arts and entertainment enthusiasts.

Parallel to Boylston Street is one of the most popular streets in Boston: Newbury Street. Known as much for its high-fashion and specialty stores as it is for its trendy cafés and shops, Newbury Street has something for everyone. Showing the great diversity of the Back Bay, the next street over, Commonwealth Avenue, with its tree-lined “mall” walkway that divides this wide street, feels like the intimate neighborhood it was created to be. On the edge of the gorgeous and noted Public Gardens, Commonwealth Avenue captures the quiet, personal feel of the Back Bay.

The Back Bay offers a large assortment of restaurants and bars, as well as art galleries, museums, The Boston Public Library, and even an outdoor farmer’s market. Additionally, the MBTA, MassPike, and Amtrak train station make traveling to 222 Berkeley and 500 Boylston commuter friendly.
1. Boston Common
2. Boston Public Garden
3. New England Medical Center
4. Trinity Church
5. Copley Square
6. Boston Public Library
7. Back Bay Station
8. Prudential Center, Copley Mall
9. Esplanade
10. Charles River
When in the Back Bay, you have an opportunity to experience a taste of every aspect of Boston—history, arts, business, education, shopping, entertainment—all housed within a true neighborhood feel. Working at 222 Berkeley or 500 Boylston enables one to live the life of the Back Bay, while at the same time work in an aesthetically pleasing atmosphere—both inside and out.